

STFI Compression

The STFI instrument measures the compression strength of linerboard and corrugating medium, using essentially a zero span or gap. This test is an alternative to ring crush and is intended to relate to the eventual compression strength of combined board made from the components.

